Opis / Description

One of the fishing most significant discoveries is how effective tai rubber lures are. Tai is a type of snapper and tai rubber is the go to lure for targeting them from the boat or shore. Ambarjacks, bonitos, mackerel, sea bream, grouper, seabass and yellow tail will also take them. There are two parts to the lure: the heavy sliding head and the rubber fly, which wafts around and consists of light rubber tassels combined with two small, double assist sharp hooks (30g, 40g & 60g models) or one offset worm hook (10g & 15g models). When you drop the lure down to the sea floor, the head falls faster than the fly, so slides down along the line with the fly trailing behind. The technique is to let the lure hit the bottom then to slowly wind up about ten meters of braid before dropping the lure back to the bottom. Two key points are to let the lure hit the bottom hard as this gains the attention of fish in the area. The second point is to slowly wind the lure up without jiggling as the assist hooks need to trail behind the lure to ensure good hookup rates.
